Exploring Herbartianism and Its Influence on Croatia's Academic Landscape

Ana Grgić

Institute of Philosophy, University of Zagreb

Discover how Johann Friedrich Herbart's educational and aesthetic philosophy helped shape modern Croatian thought in the late 19th century. This talk explores Herbart's lasting influence — especially through his follower Robert Zimmermann — on Franjo Marković, the first professor of philosophy at the University of Zagreb. Learn how Herbartian ideas became the foundation for Croatia's early academic philosophy, offering a unique, non-scholastic path during a time of cultural and political change.
